MONDAY EVENING, APRIL 21.

WHAT IT COSTS. - The price of a ticket to San Francisco and back over the Union Pacific and Central Pacific roads is a little less than three hundred dollars. To this must be added the expenses of seven or eight days' mealsaveraging three dollars a day, also the additional expense of a compartment in the Puilman car. Without this latter the journey would be unendurably fatiguing; with it, it is surprisingly comfortable.

Upon the margin of the long railway map furnished to travelers we read, that a sleeping berth from New York to San Francisco can be procured for eleven dollars, which certainly sounds remarkably cheap. But this does not mean a section, or even half a section: it refers to the minimum of space, that is, half of one of the berths, upper or under, three other persons occupying the remainder of the section. Now few persons can be really comfortable with less than a whole section,-certainly no lady traveling alone could be, -and a whole section costs forty-four dollars. It will be seen therefore that a compartment in the P. P. C. is a considerable item in the expenses of the trip.

Hotel charges in California are not so high as with us, being three dollars-sometimes two dollars and a half-a day. Carriage fares are exceedingly dear, stage fares less than in the East-on the White Mountain roads for instance. The Yo Semite excursion is an extremely costly one. No one should undertake it without an allowance of from ten to fifteen days (at least) in time, and from one hundred and thirty to one hundred and fifty dollars in money. It will then be easily seen, that it is safe to estimate the expense of two months of travel in California to vary from seven to eight hundred dollars, according as the traveller is or is not an economist. To reckon it at less would be to mislead. And this, observe, is in gold, and does not include any of the longer excursions-Southern California, the Columbia River, Puget Sound; all of which furnish points of great interest and beauty well worth an additional journey to see. - Susan Coolidge, in Scribner's for May.
